FOREWORD

On the 15th of October 1964 the Deccan College celebrates the centenary of its main Building, and curiously enough this period coincides with the Silver Jubilee of the Postgraduate and Research Institute which, as successor to the Deccan College, started functioning from 17th August 1939 when members of the teaching faculty reported for duty. When I suggested to members of our faculty the novel idea that the centenary should be celebrated by the publication of a hundred monographs representing the research carried on under the auspices of the Deccan College in its several departments they readily accepted the suggestion. These contributions are from present and past faculty members and research scholars of the Deccan College, giving a cross-section of the manifold research that it has sponsored during the past twenty-five years. From small beginnings in 1939 the Deccan College has now grown into a well developed and developing Research Institute and become a national centre in so far as Linguistics, Archaeology and Ancient Indian History, and Anthropology and Sociology are concerned. Its international status is attested by the location of the Indian Institute of German Studies (jointly sponsored by Deccan College and the Goethe Institute of Munich), the American Institute of Indian Studies and a Branch of Ecole Francaise d'Extreme-Orient in the campus of the Deccan College. The century of monographs not only symbolises the centenary of the original building and the silver jubilee of the Research Institute, but also the new spirit of critical enquiry and the promise of more to come.

PREFATORY NOTE

With the publication of Part III of the Dictionary of Pāṇini the main work comes to an end, confined to the text of the Aṣṭādhyāyī and the body of examples and counter-examples which form the stock-in-trade of the commentaries which must have accompanied the sūtras from the most ancient times, and in general preserved in the tradition inherited by the authors of Kāśikā. While there are a number of obvious omissions which are partially due to the fact that they do not usually come under the accepted system of examples and counter-examples to any given sūtra, it is possible that some may not have been included by oversight; even so, their number is strictly limited.

What now remains is the text of the Gaṇapāṭha and a repertory of forms which are derived from this text; this will form a supplement to the Dictionary, which will then be followed by a modern English rendering of the Aṣṭādhyāyī as originally contemplated for the use of the general linguist. Much of this material is ready and the Gaṇapāṭha section of the Supplement may appear before the end of the year.

An Introduction dealing with Pāṇini and the Aṣṭādhyāyī will accompany the English rendering. At the present juncture it is my pleasant duty to acknowledge the assistance I have received from my colleagues, in addition to those already mentioned in the Preface to Part I, particularly Dr. A. M. GHATAGE and Dr. N. M. SEN. Members of the Faculty belonging to the Sanskrit Dictionary Project have also rendered much assistance, and I have several times consulted Pandit K. A. S. SHASTRI, with benefit. I once again place on record my deep sense of obligation to all these colleagues as well as the Management and Staff of Shrisaraswati Mudranalaya for their tireless efforts towards reaching the highest possible perfection. Any defects, therefore, are entirely due to my own limitations and I take full responsibility for them.

(viii)

It is indeed a matter of deep satisfaction that as this work is nearing completion one notices the efflorescence of Pāṇinian Studies both in India and abroad and that more and more scholars are drawn to it. The Deccan College claims an important share in this revitalisation of this subject during the past two decades, and it is meet that the present Building Centenary and Silver Jubilee Series should include such studies within its purview.
